

Dr Maria Martin de Almagro is Assistant Professor in Gender and Politics at the Université de Montréal (Canada), member of the Centre for International Peace and Security Studies (CEPSI-CIPSS, and member of the Montreal Centre for International Studies (CERIUM). Previously, she was Marie Curie postdoctoral fellow at the University of Cambridge and Assistant Professor in International Affairs at Vesalius College, Brussels. Her primary research focuses on the advocacy around, and implementation of, the United Nations Security Council's Women, Peace and Security agenda at global, national, and local levels in post-conflict contexts.